

Bishop Daniel Maples:

Daniel Maples is a passionate communicator, dedicated leader, and lifelong servant of the church with nearly two decades of experience in ministry leadership. A graduate of Lee University and an ordained Bishop in the Church of God, Daniel is currently pursuing his Doctorate in Strategic Leadership through Oral Roberts University, with an expected graduation date of May 2027.

Daniel currently serves as the State Youth and Discipleship Director of Eastern North Carolina. Throughout his ministry journey, he has faithfully served in a diverse range of leadership roles, including Student Pastor, Lead Pastor, Evangelist, State Youth and Discipleship Director of Illinois, and International Youth and Discipleship Coordinator. These experiences have shaped his passion for developing people, strengthening leaders, and equipping the church to effectively reach the next generation.

At the heart of Daniel's ministry is a deep commitment to reaching the next generation with the hope of Christ, helping young people discover their God-given calling, and empowering them to lead with confidence and purpose in today's world. He is equally passionate about investing in the development of both emerging and established leaders.

Outside of ministry, Daniel is a devoted husband and father. He and his wife, Jordan, have three children- Alexia, Malachi, and Aubrey. His family is a central part of his life and calling, and he considers the opportunity to lead, love, and invest in his family one of his greatest responsibilities and privileges.
